My actual problem is that the rewrite rule is ignored. When I browse from a web browser it serves the directory of the actual site. If I want to access a file in the site, I have to call (the folder is the root of the site). The first time I access the url of a file, the Apache server sees that the URI isnt correct and redirects it to the default root folder with the following rewrite rule. RewriteEngine on RewriteCond %{HTTP_HOST} ^(www.)?example.de$ [NC] RewriteCond %{REQUEST_URI}!/^/htdocs/ RewriteCond %{DOCUMENT_ROOT}%{REQUEST_URI}!-f [NC] RewriteRule ^([^\/])$ [R,NC,L] When I save the file and browse it again with my browser, the file serves directly from the file-server and does not get rerouted. I thought it could be a permission-problem of the Apache Server, so I checked that with sudo a2enmod rewrite and restarted apache. The permissions are set properly.
