It was created on February 4, 2004, and was initially released as a separate web application that could be accessed via the gmail.com web domain. In addition, you can also use the Gmail app for iPhone, and the web-based Gmail app for iOS. There are three steps in the process of creating and sending an email from a Gmail account. The first is to select the recipient, add the body of the email, and then to attach the files. This is followed by selecting the files that will be attached to the email. Finally, you can send the email from the Inbox or the draft list. Gmail is a web application. This means that the email can only be sent to people who use Gmail.
